

BERRY STREET TAKE TWO

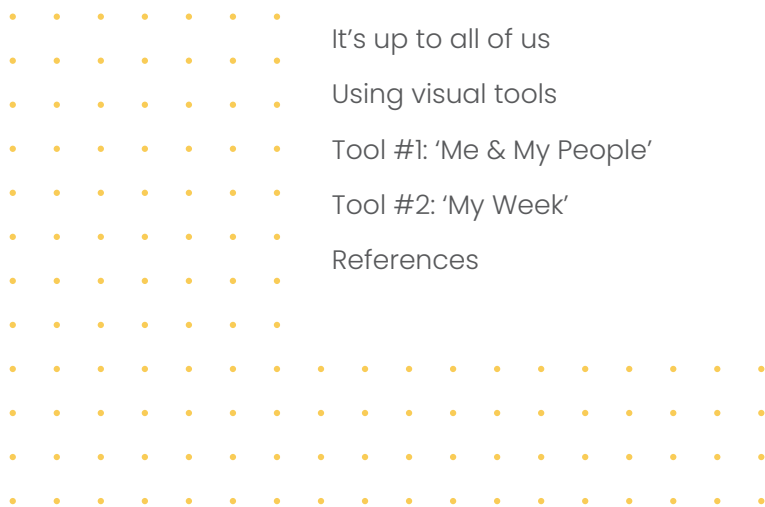

Healing Childhood Trauma

Crucial connections:
Understanding a child's relational health

Contents

Terminology	3
Who is this guide for?	3
Why we've created this guide	4
Relationships are vital for child development	5
Relationships as a buffer	5
Relationships as a cause of harm	5
Looking back to understand the way forward	6
Relationships as the first step of healing	6
Relationships as daily therapy	7
Despite best intentions	8
Understanding the child's current 'therapeutic web'	9
Understanding the quality of the relationships	10
How to find out this information	11
It's up to all of us	12
Using visual tools	13
Tool #1: 'Me & My People'	13
Tool #2: 'My Week'	14
References	15

Terminology

We've used the term child to refer to all infants, children and young people under 18 years old. The term Aboriginal is used to describe all Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.

Approximately 57,000
children aged 0–17
lived in out-of-home care during 2020–21.

(Australian Institute of Health and Welfare 2022. Child protection Australia 2020–21, Table 2.2. Cat. no. CWS 87. Canberra: AIHW.)

Who is this guide for?

This guide is written for professionals working with children whose development and day-to-day functioning has been significantly impacted by abuse, family violence, neglect and other adverse experiences. These professionals may include case managers, clinicians, therapists, case planners and those in direct caregiving roles including teachers and other educators.

